Performance and Portfolio Comment

Market overview

November was a positive month for most developed markets, as investors received more certainty on policy following the election of Donald Trump as US President and positive news on global corporate earnings for the third quarter. The US election was won convincingly by Donald Trump, with a clean sweep for the Republican Party in the White House, the Senate and the House of Representatives. US equity markets have risen to all-time highs, as investors see Trump as a positive for corporate America with the agenda of tax cuts, trade tariffs, increased government spending and reduced regulation, all of which are expected to increase US corporate earnings.

Outside US markets, the election result was met with some caution. Emerging markets underperformed developed markets. Chinese equities declined due to concerns about a future trade conflict and the assessment that the previously announced government support measures are not yet sufficient to overcome the domestic real estate and confidence crisis.

Eurozone shares were virtually flat, and economic data from the region continued to point to weakness. The German coalition government collapsed after Chancellor Scholz sacked the finance minister. New elections will be held in February 2025. Towards the end of the month, concerns began to build over France's debt. French borrowing costs rose amid worries that the government would fail to obtain sufficient parliamentary support to pass a cost-cutting budget.

Commodity returns were slightly positive between profit taking on precious metals and growing concern about gas supply. A further reduction of Russian gas deliveries to Europe and the surprising closure of a large liquid natural gas (LNG) plant in Australia helped gas prices increase by more than 20% in November.

Performance overview

Over the past 12 months, the Fund has posted a total return net of fees of 21.61%, while the market returned 27.98%*. In November, the Fund returned 4.20% net of fees outperforming the market by 0.07%.

While stock selection was positive, it was negated by the effect of negative asset allocation, leading to the slight underperformance seen over the month. Financials was the strongest contributing sector, with the benefit from being overweight augmented by supportive stock selection. It was a similar story, albeit to a lesser extent, in the Communications Services sector. The Fund also profited from having no exposure to the Utilities and Real Estate sectors. At the opposite end of the scale, Health Care was the worst contributing sector and while performance was assisted by robust stock selection, the Fund's ~12% overweight was damaging. Being underweight the Consumer Discretionary sector hit performance, as did having no exposure to Energy.

On a regional basis, both allocation to and stock selection within Asia Pacific were positive contributors to performance. And while stock selection in North America was positive, the Fund's underweight to North America impaired performance. Being overweight Europe was the largest single detractor, with holdings in Sweden, Denmark, France and the UK the culprits, and the benefit from positive stock selection was not enough to balance the books.

Four of the top five stock contributors hailed from the US. The list was topped by the UK based accounting software firm Sage Group, followed by insurance solutions provider WR Berkley, industrials supplier WW Grainger, credit card service company American Express, and finally media and entertainment giant Walt Disney.

The five stock detractors came from the Health Care and IT sectors. The list included Swiss hearing aid maker Sonova, Swedish measurement technology group Hexagon, Taiwan-listed chip foundry TSMC, Danish multinational pharmaceutical firm Novo Nordisk and US semiconductor equipment maker Applied Materials.

Dividends

There were three dividend declarations with an average increase of 6.9%. The dividend announcements consisted of Automatic Data Processing 10.0%, Sage Group 5.9% and Coloplast 4.8%.

Portfolio changes

There were no new investments or complete sales in November.
