Performance and Portfolio Comment

Market overview

Markets pared back in October, amid the escalating conflict in the Middle East, the approach of the US election, and fluctuations in central banks rate expectations. US equities were lower as the S&P 500 broke a streak of five-straight monthly gains, while the Nasdaq Composite was lower for the first time in three months. Big tech was mostly higher, notable Nvidia, though Tesla finished the month lower despite higher-than-expected earnings. As a whole the Mag 7 outperformed this month, though there were mixed takeaways around the AI secular growth theme. There was a repricing of Fed rate cut expectations, while Fed officials continued to argue that they see further rate cuts ahead, but some have questions around the pace of the cuts.

European equity markets fell for the second consecutive month. The ECB cut its key rates by 25 bps in the first back-to-back rate cut in 13 years to take its deposit rate to 3.25% and marked a new phase in its easing cycle. This was in line with expectations and highlights the relatively more predictable path of European rate cuts relative to the US. The ECB's policy statement and comments from the policymakers signalled the debate has shifted more towards growth risks.

A big focus this month was on China's announcement of new stimulus measures to boost domestic demand, stabilise the property market and address local government and bank debt risks. In addition, President Xi emphasised meeting growth targets, signalling Beijing's commitment to countering the economic slowdown.

Geopolitical tensions briefly underpinned oil as Israel and Iran exchanged missile strikes, though outright conflict was contained for now and oil remains soft on weak China economic headwinds.

Performance overview

Over the past 12 months, the Fund has posted a total return net of fees of 23.73%, while the market returned 28.16%*. In October, the Fund returned 1.46% net of fees underperforming the market by 2.08%.

Asset allocation was negative as was, and by a more significant factor, stock selection. On an absolute basis all sectors posted a positive return. During the month, the largest positive contributions came having no exposure to the Real Estate and Utilities sectors. The overall contribution from all other sectors was negative. Health Care and IT were the worst culprits. In Health Care the Fund's ~12% overweight damaged performance this month, while the impact from stock selection was negligible. In IT, poor stock selection was the Fund's worst contribution. The Financials, Materials and Consumer sectors also saw disappointing stock selection effects this month.

On a regional basis, the contribution from Asia Pacific was somewhat indifferent. Stock selection in North America was disappointing, albeit four of the top five stock contributors came from here. Being overweight Europe was a negative, however, it was stock selection in Europe that was the largest laggard, with the Fund's holdings in Denmark, the Netherlands, the UK and France underperforming.

Four of the top five stock contributors hailed from the US. The list was topped by the industrials supplier WW Grainger and the Taiwan-listed chip foundry TSMC. Also included were the online travel provider Bookings, the multinational financial services Visa and the fibre optic manufacturing company Amphenol.

The five stock detractors consisted of the Swedish multinational industrial stock Atlas Copco, the Dutch semiconductor equipment maker ASML, the Swiss dental specialist Straumann Holding, the French software solutions provider Dassault Systemes and finally the Swedish measurement technology group Hexagon.

Dividends

There were two dividend declarations with an average increase of 14.4%. The dividend announcements consisted of Brown & Brown 15.4% and Visa 13.5%.

Portfolio changes

There were no new investments or complete sales in October.
